INTRODUCTION

We have learned over this past year that the appetite for learning from our coaches is greater than ever. The exchange of information and resources from some of the top practitioners in the world is only a click away. New ways of communication and sharing of knowledge by coaches continues to grow across so many platforms.

We now know, through research, that many coaching and teaching methods used in the past are not as effective as once thought. Therefore, it is important that coaches engage with learning to understand research which is creating a new movement of coaches across the world.

With this in mind, coach education and continuous coach development is considered to be essential to both sustaining and improving the quality of coaching. Coach education & development is assumed as an all-encompassing term that refers to the process leading towards enhanced expertise. This learning occurs from accessing a range of opportunities (informal to formal). In an attempt to support this development, our Camogie coach education structures offer a variety of programmes, learning opportunities & resources for coaches of all levels.

In addition to these we are extremely grateful for the support and collaboration within coach education and development that has been offered by both the GAA & LGFA at national, provincial and county level.
